RTVELISI

THE SOUL OF GEORGIA

WINEMAKING

Rtvelisi is more than a winemaking company it is a tribute to Georgia's centuries-old tradition of viticulture, where every grape tells a story, and every bottle carries the essence of our land.

Founded by lifelong friends who inherited a deep love for winemaking, Rtvelisi was born from the sun-drenched vineyards of Kakheti, where vines have been nurtured for generations. Our passion for excellence and respect for tradition shape everything we create from classic Georgian wines and traditional Qvevri wines to Sparkling wines, Brandy, and Chacha.

A LEGACY ROOTED IN TIME

Our story begins long before Rtvelisi was officially established. It can be traced back to 1920, when a historic patriarchal cellar passed down through generations was lovingly restored. Today, this very cellar continues to house the heart of our production.

The inspiration for Rtvelisi was born during the harvest season a time of celebration, unity, and gratitude for the vine. Our name itself is a homage to the Georgian tradition of "Rtveli" the sacred act of grape picking, an 8,000-year-old ritual that binds our people to the land.

From the very first day, we set out with a clear purpose: to craft wines of uncompromising quality and unforgettable taste, carrying Georgia's winemaking heritage into the future.

Rtvelisi is not just a name it is a promise. In both Georgian and international markets, we are dedicated to producing wines of the highest standard, distinguished by their exceptional taste and character.

THE LAND THAT DEFINES US

Spread across 250 hectares, our vineyards are located both in unique micro-zones of Kakheti and in more traditional vineyard areas. We cultivate Rkatsiteli, Saperavi, Kisi, Kakhuri Mtsvane, and other classic Georgian grape varieties. With each passing season, we continue to expand, exploring new terroirs across Georgia to bring the most authentic wines to our partners and customers.

Nestled in the very heart of Georgia's wine industry, Rtvelisi is located in Telavi, where the ideal altitude ranging from 550 to 880 meters above sea level creates the perfect conditions for cultivating world-class wines. This unique terroir, shaped by the Caucasus Mountains and the Alazani Valley, allows us to produce wines that are both distinctive and deeply expressive of their origin.

Our winery, based in the village of Shalauri near Telavi, Kakheti, is where ancient traditions merge with modern innovation. Equipped with cutting-edge European technology and a world-class laboratory, our facility allows us to uphold the highest standards of quality while preserving the soul of Georgian winemaking.

At Rtvelisi, we do not simply produce wine we craft experiences, bottled memories, and a taste of Georgia's rich heritage. Every sip tells a story, and every bottle carries the heart of our land.

WHERE INNOVATION MEETS TRADITION

Our winery, based in the village of Shalauri near Telavi, is where ancient traditions merge with modern excellence. Equipped with the most advanced European technologies, we ensure that every bottle meets the highest standards:

- Czech “Letina” stainless steel tanks for precise fermentation and aging
- Italian “GAI” bottling lines for premium quality and efficiency
- “Della Toffola” presses for gentle yet thorough grape processing
- Pulley and Zambelli pumps and filters for optimal wine transfer and filtration
- French oak barrels for refined aging and enhanced wine complexity

With these advanced facilities, Rtvelisi has the capacity to receive and process more than 7,000 tons of grapes per year, producing an impressive 6 million bottles of wine annually.

A CELEBRATION OF QVEVRI WINEMAKING

Our winery houses an extensive Qvevri cellar with meticulously crafted clay vessels of various sizes, ranging from 1,700 to 1,900 liters (T). With this capacity, we can produce up to 80 tons of Qvevri wine annually.

Each Qvevri plays a crucial role in shaping our wines’ complex aromas and rich textures. The porous clay allows for natural micro-oxygenation, enhancing depth and character while preserving the wine’s authenticity.

This ancient method, recognized by UNESCO as an intangible cultural heritage of humanity, remains a cornerstone of our philosophy. By combining tradition with precise craftsmanship, we ensure that every bottle reflects the true essence of Georgian winemaking.

—BORN IN GEORGIA—

From Old Vineyards

Crafted in the heart of Kakheti, this exquisite red dry wine is made from the finest Saperavi grapes, hand-harvested from the historic Rtselisi vineyards. The exceptional quality of the grapes is ensured through meticulous “green harvesting,” allowing only the best to reach perfection. Selected with care, these premium grapes are hand-picked at night and gently processed at dawn to preserve their rich character.

Following fermentation, the wine is aged for 16 months in French oak barrels, enhancing its depth and complexity. An intense aroma of ripe cherries unfolds, intertwined with delicate hints of spices and whispers of vanillin, creating a truly refined bouquet. With time, bottle maturation will further elevate its elegance and structure.

Perfectly paired with roasted or grilled meats, this wine is best enjoyed at a serving temperature of +16°C to +18°C.

GEORGIAN WINE BRANDY

Wine brandy is a unique, all-natural spirit made by distilling wine. The young brandy spirit is initially colorless and has a consistency similar to medicinal alcohol. To transform it into wine brandy, it is aged in oak barrels.

Oakwood contains lignin, a compound that is not found in other types of wood. This substance quickly and dramatically alters the taste and color of the spirit. The initial flavor of the brandy may be bitter, but as it ages, the brandy is transferred to larger, older oak barrels, which have fewer tannins and allow for greater oxidation. This process smooths the flavor and enriches the brandy's character. Lignin in the oak is responsible for imparting a distinct fragrance and flavor to brandy, distinguishing it from other spirits. The longer the brandy is aged, the more complex and developed its flavor becomes.

Wine brandy belongs to the group of spirits and is made from distilled grape wine, with no other substances involved in its production. To make brandy, only specific grape varieties are used—those with high acidity, low sugar content, and a neutral flavor profile.

The aroma is a key characteristic of brandy. Aromatic compounds in brandy create its distinctive fragrance. At lower temperatures, these compounds can be less pronounced, but as the brandy warms, its delicate scent becomes more noticeable. This unique aromatic feature sets brandy apart from other spirits.

CHACHA

Chacha is a traditional Georgian spirit made from fermented grapes, commonly known as "grape Chacha." This strong alcoholic beverage is produced by distilling grape mash once or twice, resulting in an alcohol content typically ranging from 40% to 65%.

Organoleptically, Chacha is a clear, colorless liquid with a distinct aroma and flavor. When aged, it can develop a color ranging from colorless to dark straw. The aging process takes place in wooden vessels, often oak, which enhances the drink's taste by imparting subtle flavors.

The grapes used in Chacha production must meet the same quality standards as those for wine production, ensuring a high-quality product.

Cultural Significance

Chacha is deeply ingrained in Georgian culture and is considered the national drink. It is commonly served during toasts, celebrations, and family gatherings, symbolizing hospitality and tradition.

Distillation Process

Chacha can be distilled once or twice, with double distillation typically producing a smoother, more refined flavor. The distillation method plays a key role in determining the drink's overall character and potency.
